

Who carries over from one period to the next

Ribbon width is the number of ministers two periods have in common; each period's arc is scaled by its own size plus its carry-over. Neighbours share heavily and distant periods barely at all — carry-over is a handover between adjacent governments, not a durable class. Fig. 22 has the exact counts across all eight eras.