

How often government recruited a new face, by era

Single-party rule, revolution and multiparty competition all recruited fresh faces at between a fifth and a third of appointments. The rate is a ratio of two flows, so it does not inflate with the length of an era the way fig. 10's counts do. Only the post-2021 governments break the band. An era is the one each appointment is coded to, not the calendar year. Pre-1956 is excluded: source coverage there is too thin for a rate (fig. 1).
